ENTERTAINMENTS.

Hyperion.
Nat. C. Goodwin and his admirable company of players, with a full equipment of scenic effects and properties, will appear Monday evening next in the powerful character play "In Miz-zoura." This beautiful play has been seen in all the large cities and the press throughout the country bestows the highest of praise upon it. "In Old Kentucky," which is to be seen here on Wednesday night, is one of the most elaborate and expensive productions of the year. The play opens in the mountains of southern Kentucky, and the scene shifts to the beautiful Blue Grass region. There is a stirring race between genuine Kentucky horses and numerous other exciting scenes. "In Old Kentucky" was the greatest success of last season in New York. Sale of seats opens Monday.

Donnelly and Girard will be seen in the "The Rainmakers" on Friday evening, February 2.

Grand Opera House.

There was a large attendance at the matinee yesterday at the Grand Opera house when "The Merry War" was given. In the evening "Indiana" was presented. It was the usual tale told all through this week "Standing room only."

This afternoon "Neil Gwynne" will be presented and at the concluding performance this evening "Falke" will be given.

The "Living Pictures" are increasing in public favor every day, which is attested by the immense crowds that daily throng the Grand. The graceful models are much admired and the battle scenes and humorous pictures are much applauded. But the one picture above all others that attracts most attention is "Tribby," portrayed by Miss Helen York, a very pretty girl.

At the matinee to-day Mr. E. A. Clark will be the old time ballad, "Ben Bold," while the picture of "Tribby" is exposed to view. The matinee prices are fifteen, twenty-five and thirty-five cents. All desiring to attend the performance this evening should secure seats in advance.

Oliver Byron in his great drama, "Ups and Downs of Life," will appear the first three nights next week. Matinee on Wednesday.

The lecture hall annex at the Grand opera house, which is open free to the visitors to the theater, will have for its attractions next week Professor Schurr's great collection of birds, snakes, bugs, beetles and other curiosities, which on account of their great success have been retained for one week longer.

Prof. Darling, the leader of the orchestra, shows great ability in his excellent directorship, and he has the chorus admirably trained. He also conducts all the opera without a score. Prof. Darling has been with this organization for the past seven seasons, during which time he has composed several pieces. He is well known in this city, where he has many friends.

Poll's Wonderful Theater.

Granjeau and May's great performance on the slack wire interests immense audiences and William H. Daly, the great parody singer, divides interest with them. And then don't miss seeing Miss Gladys Van, the Sankoy brothers, Napier and Marzelo, the Misses Swinburne and Howard, the Emmet trio, Pete Shaw and the Durell twin brothers. For next week a great company of artists will appear. The Manhattan Comedy Four will undoubtedly prove a great attraction, and then George K. Fortescue, the three-hundred-pound comedian, of "Evangeline" fame, and Richard Gorman will be able seconds. The Rixford brothers, Havens and Andrews, Miss Minnie Bland, Shayne and Worden, Frank Burt and others will add to the attractions.

TWO RED SHOES.

The Strange Adventure of the Little Girl That Wore Them.

[From the Philadelphia Times.]
Two hundred years ago, if you had been alive, you might have seen her and talked with her, this little girl, who was a baby in those distant years of the seventeenth century, when Milton was writing those stately cantos of the "Paradise Lost," and King Philip and his Indians were making so much trouble for our great-grandfathers on the New England frontiers.

How curious she would look to us now in her quaint, old-fashioned dress, made just like her mother's so that she resembled a little woman in miniature! Her jacket of white linen was drawn about her waist with a black cord, and met the blue woolen petticoat that had not a flounce or a ruffle in it.

She wore on her head, over her short, silky curls, a small, stiff linen cap, for bangs had not been invented then. A pair of red shoes completed the toilet of this little Puritan maiden, except when she went to church, and then she put on a high-crowned, steeple-shaped hat, and threw a long red cloak over her shoulders.

Very much like this, excepting the hat and cloak, looked little Sally Coleman one September morning in 1677.

She was only a five-year-old girl and those little red shoes were fresh and new from the counter of a small store in Hatfield, on the Connecticut river, then a small border town.

Very proud was Sally of those little red shoes, and she was busy trying them on and thinking how nice they would look on Sunday as she went with her father into the square, backlime wooden church to listen to one of Parson Tenny's long sermons. She had just put them on and was walking up and down the kitchen floor, when she was startled with a loud war whoop; and immediately several painted Indians, looking very frightful with their war-dresses and weapons, rushed in and seized the little lady, red shoes and all, and carried her screaming away.

All in a moment the happy child was made a very sad one. She saw her mother and her little sisters killed by the red men, and her home all in flames; and in company with many another captive she was marched into the wilderness.

To Canada, all the way over the frozen lakes and the rivers and the hard, rough ground, a desolate, tedious journey in the cold autumn months, tramp-

NEW YORK CITY MERCHANT

HOW HIS LIFE WAS SAVED.

[From the New York City Catholic News.]
No one would think to look at Richard B. Brown, a commission merchant of No. 36 Washington street, New York City, that for six weeks he had suffered in agony in his bed and that physicians had said it was impossible for him to regain his health.
But now he is back in his office, vigorous and hearty. He regards Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy as the savior of his life. The story Mr. Brown tells is remarkable.
"For several years," said Mr. Brown to a reporter the other day, "I suffered from inflammation and ulceration of the bladder, a most stubborn disease. My family physician was unable to relieve me. At the advice of friends I consulted specialists, and they all failed to do me any good. All this time I was growing weaker. My capacity for work decreased, and at last I was compelled to take to my bed."
"My mother-in-law had heard of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and she asked me to give it a trial. I had been confined to my bed for five weeks and I admit that I didn't think there was much chance of getting out of it. Well, I tried Favorite Remedy. There seemed to be a change that surprised me. In a week I was able to get out of bed and go around the house, and in a short time I recovered completely. Today I am as well as ever, and what's better yet I feel that I am permanently cured. I can work sixteen or eighteen hours a day now and not be broken up a bit. To Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is all the credit due."

Favorite Remedy ranks, with the medical profession, as the most perfect of all blood and nerve medicines. It restores the liver to a healthy condition and cures the worst cases of constipation. It is a certain cure for all diseases peculiar to females and affords great protection from attacks that originate in change of life. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, rheumatism, dyspepsia, all kidney, bladder and urinary diseases, gravel, diabetes, and Bright's disease.

In this last disease it has cured where all else failed. Any druggist can supply it at one dollar a bottle.

ed the red shoes. Often the little feet were weary, and often little Sally's heart must have been despairing and ready to faint by the wayside.

One of her savage captors took pity on her forlorn condition and did what he could to help her, carrying her on his brawny shoulders when she could not walk further, making a soft couch of hemlock boughs for her comfort when they camped at night, and selecting for the homesick little girl the juiciest steaks from the sides of bear and deer that he killed in hunting.

So the red shoes did not wear out, though they had to be mended more than once with stout deer's sinews. And glad, you may be sure, was the pioneer John Coleman, when the faded, worn shoes crossed his threshold, one bright May morning, having been to Canada and back again. Some good friends of the Colemans had influence enough with the French and the Indians to effect Sally's release, and Count Frontenac, the French Governor, ordered a guard of soldiers to attend the child and her companions back to Hatfield.

And the cunning little shoes, soled with leather from England, bound with silk from France, sewed with deer's sinews from the Canadian forests, whose red serge uppers were brought from Holland by way of New Amsterdam, may still be seen, soiled and ragged, one of them in the collection of the Old South church, Boston, the other in the museum of the memorial association of Deerfield, Mass.

Just think of it—a pair of shoes more than two hundred years old and with such a history! Would you like to see them? They are much the oldest pair of shoes in America, and I think they ought to be kept together.

Little Sally grew to be a woman and had little children of her own, and I dare say she often told them of the journey those shoes had taken, and of the bitter trials she experienced as captive among the Indians. Very likely, the children thought the shoes quite as wonderful as their mother did, and never tired of hearing their story. I can imagine them on a Sunday night, when all was still and the snow lay white and silent around the pioneer's house, clambering upon their mother's knees and whispering:

"Please tell us about the little red shoes that went to Canada and back." The little girl that wore them has been dead these long, long years; and for those two red shoes it is doubtful if Sally Coleman would be remembered to-day. Certain it is, I should not have had this story to tell, for I should not have of it but for seeing the interesting relics during a recent vacation.

The Middle Temple's Secret.

[From the London Telegraph.]

While making some alterations in Middle Temple Hall for the installation of the electric light into that stately edifice the workmen found a box concealed in a recess of the wall near the roof. It was opened, and in it they saw a skeleton in a perfect state of preservation. From the appearance of the bones it must have lain hidden there for a considerable time—perhaps a couple of centuries or more. Whether the skeleton be that of a lawyer or a client cannot now be ascertained; or it may even be an osseous framework which has been used in anatomical demonstrations to illustrate how much the law can take out of a man. What the skeleton was in life and how it got into the box in Middle Temple Hall are mysteries.
